Position for an Economist

The Centre for the Study of Living Standards (CSLS) has an opening for an entry-level economist for either a fixed-term or indeterminate position.

The duties associated with the position are twofold:

- undertake research and write reports on topics related to productivity, living standards, and economic well-being in Canada and other countries;
- develop and maintain databases on productivity, living standards and economic well-being variables.

Qualifications: Graduate training in economic is preferred, but applicants with a strong undergraduate degree in economics looking for one to two years of work experience before pursuing graduate studies will be considered.

Established in 1995, the CSLS is a national, not-for-profit economic research organization based in Ottawa. Its primary objectives is to contribute to a better understanding of trends in and determinants of productivity, living standards and economic well-being in Canada through research. The CSLS publishes the International Productivity Monitor. For additional information, go to the CSLS website (www.csls.ca)`

Applications, including a covering letter and CV, should be emailed to CSLS Executive Director Andrew Sharpe (andrew.sharpe@csls.ca). The deadline for applications is March 15, 2017.
